

Your sister is being mean and picking on you. Instead of yelling at her, you ask her to please stop and remove yourself from the situation.

Your brother or sister tries to say “sorry” for something they did wrong, but you are very mad and will not forgive them.

You are struggling in school and pray daily for God’s help. You work hard and notice him helping you.

Your friend leaves because you won’t share your toys with him/her. So you decide to play by yourself.

You are willing to share what you have with others, and notice how it makes you happy to share.

You told a lie about finishing your homework before playing.
